Relationships and Sex Education Policy

Introduction

We have based our school's Relationship and Sex Education (RSE) policy on the DfE guidance document 'Relationship and Sex Education Guidance' (ref DfE 0116/2000). In this document, sex education is defined as 'lifelong learning about physical, moral and emotional development. It is about the understanding of the importance of marriage for family life, stable and loving relationships, respect, love and care. It is also about the teaching of sex, sexuality and sexual health.'

What is Relationships and Sex Education?

Effective relationships and sex education is essential if young people are to make responsible and well informed decisions about their lives. The objective of relationship and sex education is to help and support young people through their physical, emotional and moral development. It will help them to learn to respect themselves and others and move with confidence from childhood through adolescence into adulthood.

Why is RSE in schools important?

High quality RSE helps create safe school communities in which pupils can grow, learn, and develop positive, healthy behaviour for life. It is essential for the following reasons:

- Children and young people want to be prepared for the physical and emotional changes they undergo at puberty, and young people want to learn about relationships.
- Older pupils frequently say that sex and relationships education was 'too little, too late and too biological'. OFSTED reinforced this in their 2013 'Not Yet Good Enough report'.
- RSE plays a vital part in meeting schools' safeguarding requirements. OFSTED is clear that schools must have a preventative programme that enables pupils to learn about safety and risks in relationships.

Aims

At Woodlands, we teach RSE in the context of our aims and values which is part of our wider social, personal, spiritual and moral education and within our character development education programme. The aim of RSE is to provide children with age appropriate information, explore attitudes and values and develop skills in order to empower them to make positive decisions about their health-related behaviour.

RSE at Woodlands

- is a partnership between home and school;
- is age appropriate and relevant to pupils at each stage in their development and maturity;
- is inclusive of difference and challenges stereotypes and prejudice;

- respects the views of other people;
- develops an awareness in children of their own personal safety including what they should do if they are worried about any sexual matters;
- ensures that all children are assertive and have the confidence to say and do what is right;
- ensures that all children understand the dangers associated with online technologies and will help children to develop strategies to keep safe;
- contributes to a child's better understanding of diversity and inclusion, a reduction in gender-based and homophobic prejudice, bullying and violence and an understanding of the difference between consenting and exploitative relationships;
- promotes positive relationships with others, involving trust and respect;
- recognises the importance of a committed, long-term, and loving relationship and the importance of family life;
- supports the children to learn the importance of self-control and cope with the influences of their peers and the media;
- challenges body image and stereotypes, particularly in the media;
- develops a child's respect and care for their bodies;
- supports the children in the acquisition of medically and factually correct knowledge;
- prepare children for puberty and adulthood;
- helps pupils gain access to information and support;
- aims to reduce early sexual activity, teenage conceptions, sexual exploitation and abuse, domestic violence and bullying;
- uses active learning methods, and is rigorously planned, assessed and evaluated;
- ensures children's views are actively sought to influence lesson planning and teaching.

Curriculum

We teach RSE through different aspects of the curriculum. While we carry out the main RSE education teaching in our PSHE curriculum, using Christopher Winter resources, we also teach some RSE through other subject areas (for example Science and PE) where we feel it contributes to a child's knowledge and understanding of their body, and how it is changing and developing. All schools must teach the following as part of the National Curriculum for Science. [Non-statutory guidance shown in brackets.]

Key Stage1 National Curriculum Science:

- Identify, name, draw and label the basic parts of the human body and say which part of the body is associated with each sense.
- Notice that animals, including humans, have offspring which grow into adults.
- Describe the importance for humans of exercise, eating the right amounts of different types of food, and hygiene.

- [They should also be introduced to the process of reproduction and growth in animals.]
- [The focus at this stage should be on questions that help pupils to recognise growth; they should not be expected to understand how reproduction occurs.]

Key Stage 2 National Curriculum Science:

- Describe the difference in the life cycles of a mammal, an amphibian, an insect and a bird.
- Describe the life process of reproduction in some plants and animals.
- Describe the changes as humans develop to old age.
- [Pupils should find out about the different types of reproduction including sexual and asexual reproduction in plants, and sexual reproduction in animals.]
- [Pupils should draw a timeline to indicate stages in the growth and development of humans. They should learn about the changes experienced in puberty.]
- [Pupils should continue to learn about the importance of nutrition and should be introduced to the main body parts associated with the skeleton and muscles, finding out how different parts of the body have special functions.]
- [Pupils could work scientifically by researching the gestation periods of other animals and comparing them with humans; by finding out and recording the length and mass of a baby as it grows.]

Our RSE curriculum is clearly mapped out for each year group to ensure that sensitive topics are taught in an age appropriate way with clear progression. This content has been agreed in consultation with governors, parents, children and staff. The table below outlines the topics taught by the end of each phase.

We have a planned programme which we will follow as long as it is appropriate for the needs of the children, however, due to the nature of the subject, we are aware that there may be times when children ask questions out of the context of a planned session. If children do ask about issues linked to RSE, they will be dealt with appropriately and sensitively. There may be times when a member of staff does not immediately answer a child's question but speaks to them on later or refers them to speak to their parent or carer.

Teaching and resources will be differentiated as appropriate to address the needs of SEND children in order for them to have full access to the content of RSE.

The role of parents and other professionals

- Woodlands Primary School understands that the primary role in children's sex and relationship education lies initially with a child's parents and carers. However we do not underestimate the role of school and staff that play a pivotal part in teaching our children about RSE. We wish to build a positive and supporting relationship with the parents of children at our school through mutual understanding, trust and co-operation. We believe that through a mutual exchange of knowledge and information, all of our children will benefit from being given consistent messages about their changing body and their increasing responsibilities.
- To promote this, at Woodlands Primary School we:
 - inform parents about the RSE policy and practice;
 - answer any questions that parents may have about RSE;
 - take seriously any issues that parents raise with teachers or governors about this policy or the arrangements for RSE in the school;
 - seek the views of parents and encourage them to be involved in reviewing the RSE policy;
 - inform parents about the best practice known about RSE, so that the teaching in school supports the key messages that parents and carers give to children at home.

At Woodlands Primary School we recognise that parents have the right to withdraw their child from those aspects of RSE not included in the Science National Curriculum. However parents should discuss this with the Headteacher and make it clear which aspects of the programme they do not wish their child to participate in and why. By working in partnership with parents we will work to ensure that parents recognise the importance of this aspect of their child's education.

At Woodlands Primary School, we encourage and welcome external agencies and other valued members of the community to work with us to provide advice and support. In particular, members of the Local Health Authority, such as the school nurse and other health professionals, will give us valuable support with our relationship and sex education programme. We believe that visitors should complement and never substitute or replace planned provision and it is the RSE/PSHE subject leaders and class teachers' responsibility to plan the RSE curriculum and lessons.

Preventative curriculum

In line with our safeguarding policy, we recognize that our school has an important role in the delivery of the 'preventative curriculum'; teaching children the knowledge and skills they need to protect themselves from all forms of abuse and to develop an understanding of how to keep themselves safe.

At Woodlands Primary School, we recognise that abuse is one of the very worst things that can ever happen to a child, but it's not always easy to pick up the signs, and often a child might not even know that what's happening is wrong. Our curriculum aims to help teachers, parents and children to address some of these issues. This supports the preventative curriculum and our moral and legal obligation to safeguard and promote the welfare of our pupils.

At Woodlands Primary School, through our ambitious and progressive curriculum, we aim to provide our children with the skills to recognise abusive behaviour and understand that abusive relationships are never acceptable or right. We support our children by:

- Responding to disclosures and child protection concerns quickly and efficiently;
- Promoting a 'listening' school ethos;
- Offering appropriate support for children and staff dealing with abuse;
- Offering children opportunities to build self-esteem and confidence and to develop respectful relationships;
- Working with outside providers to develop a broad range of curriculum enhancement activities;
- Covering how children can keep safe within the PSHE curriculum;
- Participating in high quality child protection training for all staff;
- Highlighting children's rights

Responding to disclosures

As a result of any RSE lesson, or indeed any lesson in our curriculum, a child might disclose that they are suffering from a form of abuse or are aware of it happening to others. Any disclosure of abuse will be treated as a potential child protection concern, and reported to the designated safeguarding lead in line with the school's procedures.

In line with our school safeguarding policy, when listening to and dealing with disclosures, staff will:

- Actively listen to the child;
- Stay calm;
- Take what the child is saying seriously;
- Reassure the child that they are doing the right thing;

- Tell the child that they will have to share this information;
- Explain what will happen next;
- Record the information as quickly as possible – facts not opinion;
- Sign and date everything they record.

Equal Opportunities

At Woodlands Primary School we are committed to ensuring equality of education and opportunity for all pupils, staff, and all those receiving services from the school regardless of gender, race, and disability.

Monitoring and review

This policy will be monitored and reviewed as part of our regular policy review schedule.
